

Is it illegal to install photovoltaic panels in the yard

Overview

Technically, no state outlaws or bans solar panels; quite the opposite. Permitting for off-grid solar systems can vary significantly by municipality, with rural areas having minimal requirements and urban areas often having stringent regulations. California layers several overlapping rules on residential solar energy systems, from a mandate requiring panels on most new homes to streamlined permitting, strict installation codes, and a compensation structure for electricity you send back to the grid. It is important to research and follow the local regulations to obtain the . In April 2011, SB 2 (1X) (Simitian) was signed into law, which codified a 33% RPS requirement to be achieved by 2020. SB 350 includes interim annual RPS targets with three-year compliance periods.
