Overview

The Wairau Valley farm in Marlborough, which is working since March 2021, is the country's first to use the multi MW technology. The Marsden Point oil refinery, owned by Refining NZ, has decided to go green by installing a solar farm on 31 hectares of their land. In 2024, 601 gigawatt-hours of electricity was estimated to have been generated by grid-connected solar, 1. [1] As of the end of January 2026 . As a leading global new energy enterprise, Risen Energy leads the global energy revolution with solar cells, solar modules, and photovoltaic power stations, etc. The 31 hectare farm will be New Zealand's largest and will supply 26. This makes up an estimated contribution of under 1% of total electricity consumption. Globally, solar PV uptake has increased significantly over the past decade.
