

Rural talent makes his own solar power generation

Overview

It's been 10 years since Ibrahim and his co-founder Charles Nichols launched SunCulture, a start-up headquartered in Nairobi, Kenya that helps farmers grow food without relying on rainfall by using solar-powered irrigation systems instead. Although 2025 presented considerable challenges for the solar energy industry, utility-scale solar power continues to generate substantial benefits for communities throughout the United States. Rural regions, where many of these projects are located, have experienced notable economic benefits . Reactivate, American Farmland Trust, and Edelen Renewables Community Solar recently announced a new partnership: Farmers Powering Communities (FPC). The mission of Farmers Powering Communities is: "Bringing together those working to feed the planet with those working to power America. In partnership with other renewable energy sources such as wind and geothermal, our nation's energy grid is expected to rise from 19% renewable in 2019 to 38% in 2050, with solar energy accounting for .
