Overview

SAN FRANCISCO (KGO) -- The California Supreme Court is set to hear the oral arguments Wednesday in a lawsuit that's trying to put more money back into the pockets of people with rooftop solar panels. The lawsuit stems from an April 2023 policy update by the California Public . That's 3,000 homeowners standing up to lenders over unfair solar panel loans. This fall will be extremely busy, with trials set to ramp up. By September or October, we'll have a much clearer picture of how . Solar energy is a transformative solution for reducing carbon footprints and lowering energy costs, making it an increasingly popular choice for homeowners. However, integrating solar panels into HOA-governed communities often leads to legal complexities, as some HOAs impose restrictive rules or . But with this expansion, has come an increasing number of disgruntled solar customers that are posting bad reviews about solar companies online, filing complaints with agencies such as the Better Business Bureau (BBB), state consumer protection departments and Attorney Generals, and even taking . If your solar company misled you or botched your installation, here's how to build a case, file a claim, and recover your losses. But those choices now face strict judicial oversight, thanks to a ruling in a lawsuit over the future of net energy metering that returns to court this month.
